Guy Miller is Zurich Group's Chief Market Strategist and Head of Macroeconomics and is part of Zurich's Leadership Team. As Chief Market Strategist, he is responsible for defining the relative merits of equities, sovereign debt and corporate credit across the globe and on currency hedging. Guy is also responsible for providing the global economic backdrop that lays the foundation for planning and business decisions. Economic forecasts are made on both a short and medium term basis, capturing the major themes that are likely to shape the global economy. Guy is a regular guest on financial television and radio channels and has represented Zurich on a number of high-level working groups.

Before joining Zurich in 2003, Guy was head of US equity portfolio management at Shell Pensions, where he was a member of the Asset Allocation Committee and supervised the implementation of satellite investment mandates in the North American region. Prior to over 7 years spent at Shell Pensions, Guy was a US fund manager at National Mutual for 6 years.

Guy holds a BA Hons in Commerce, from Napier University, and is an Associate of the Institute of Investment Management and Research.
